

NYU Hospital for Joint Diseases Clinical Research Methodology Course—2007 “Randomized Clinical Trials and the Real World”

Yusuf Yazici, M.D., and Steven B. Abramson, M.D.

Dear Colleagues,

We are happy to present the proceedings from our clinical research methodology course, “Randomized Clinical Trials and the Real World.” The second of this annual course was held on December 14th, 2007, at the NYU Hospital for Joint Diseases. In addition to the articles presented here, you can listen to the lectures as podcasts and have an opportunity to review the speakers’ slides on our website at www.nyhjdbulletin.org.

We would also like to extend our gratitude to our distinguished faculty and attendees, who made this important, relevant, and interesting course possible.

Our third clinical research methodology course will be held in December 2008 at the NYU Hospital for Joint Diseases. We will be sending detailed information soon for now, save the date!

We hope you find these proceedings useful and extend our appreciation to each and every one of you for your continued support.
